FROM TEXAS TO THE CHEROKEE STRIP.

A Tenderfoot's Trip Up the Trail.

It was a grand sight to see thirty-five hundred cattle tossing their horns in the morning wind as they filed down the valley of the Big Bend of the 15th of June, 1889. The shouting of forty "cow boys," the roar of tramping horns, the clouds of dust, and the sea of moving bodies and tails made a picture long to be remembered. As the last of the herd filed past the influence on which I stood I turned to the country and gazed down the valley. Upon reaching the herd I asked for and obtained employment from Ed. Cobb, part owner of the three-thousand cattle, who intended driving a herd of three-year-old steers to the Cherokee Strip. After reaching the mouth of the river, the steers were driven over a fresh pond and I immediately turned his head homeward to prepare for my trip up the "trail." The next day I returned to the herd and met it at the "weight mile" tank. I found that many of the cattle had been "cut out" and driven off to the eastward, and the steers were materially reduced in number. The next day the herd was driven to the railroad tank near Wichita Falls and then the "cutting" began in dead earnest. The cattle were "rounded up" by being driven together and the cow boys riding around them after they were all together were packed into a small compass, and circular drive; then several "boys" "held" them while others rode among them and "cut" or drove out all except the three-hundred brand. Cutting cattle is extremely hard work for both man and beast; the operation runs in straight lines and poor roads and they look like homed at end of chain. We spent several days at this tank getting the herd in shape and clear of all strays, and here it was that my work commenced. I was given a "mount" of ponies and put on saddles and harness and driven to the tank bounds while allowing them to graze. Three men were generally appointed to this duty, but one afternoon I was left alone and I determined to hold them or kill my pony. "Grey Eagle" I had great trouble in keeping back a mile's breadth of cattle and while running my horse at full speed his feet slipped from under him and down we came like an avalanche. I was then I found that high breasted horns and Texas spurs were like the armor of Dan Quixote, good enough in the middle, but rather cumbersome on hand. As luck would have it both horse and rider rose unhurt, and, with the exception of a broken spur, bent saddle and being covered with dust, none would know of our fall. I leaped to the saddle and held the herd until relieved.
The next day the "flying V" brand was cut out and we left our camp at Duck Creek. Our party was composed of nine men; two "pointers," Kabin and Laid; five drivers, Cobb, Christian, Gardener, Markham and Barn-side; the cook, Gardiner; and the "horse rider," myself. By the way, at Laid's, or "Pantender," as he is called, hairs from Laid's and may be known to some readers of the Columbian. I rapidly learned the character and disposition of my mates and found that "cow boys" are neither desperadoes nor devils; amiable or angels.
On the 22nd we were riding on the banks of the river, with thirteen hundred head of cattle. About sun down I noticed a company of Comanches, in point and leather, slipping through the timber towards our camp, but they were friendly and were on their way to Philadelphia to join a circus. I was very much amused at this and learned to comfort the saying that an Indian seldom laughs, for upon entering into conversation with one of "them" I soon had him laughing heartily at some Indian jokes of my spinning. The next day we broke camp at daylight. They are for sale on the most reasonable terms. If you want a vehicle, come and see me, and you will go home without regret.
JOHN DONELSON.

THE WHITE HORSE.

In the quick-sand, the cattle "milled" and trampled those in the quick-sand until we allowed them to fall back.
Three ropes were thrown over the horns of one steer and attached to the horns of three others, and these horses were used as a strong pull, but it was no use.
The steer was apparently planted as solid as the pyramids of Egypt. The sand of this river is very loamy, very alluvial, when it once gets hold of a thing it holds on to it like a small boy holding a toy. Nothing remained but to dig them out. Just below it I noticed a wagon tongue sticking in the sand and was informed that a wagon and a load of corn was attached to the tongue down there somewhere. Three fellows were digging it out and from under the sand a horse's head and hind legs came up. The horse was dead but it fell gallop a distance of two miles for another. It took us four hours to dig out our steers. Six horses were attached to our chuck wagon and it was taken across at full speed to keep from "sinking." From the Comanche country the steers were driven and we had been in the Chickasaw Nation. The majority of the land is barren, but little farming is done, although the Chickasaws are civilized.
Cattlemen control matters in the Territory. I ate dinner with an old "squaw" and the steers were driven to the Cherokee Strip. I told her that I was from a very far away and in my land were high mountains, deep big trees, and deep big waters. She told me that she was a Chickasaw, and that she came from "heap big place," all mountains, no big trees, all hills,

Wilkie Collins, the great novelist, is dead.

Nelson won the $10,000 trotting station race at Boston, Monday, at 2:17.

James McCreary is the Democratic nominee for Clerk of Fleming county.

The Democrats of the Dakotas complain that the National Democratic committee is making no effort to carry the October election.

FOREIGN OPPOSITION.

An exchange says: All Europe is trying to handicap Congressman McCreary's measure for commercial conference between all countries on the Western continent south of us. The only thing that stands in the way of permanent commercial union is the prohibitory tariff of this country. Remove this and all Europe would be powerless to prevent it.

DUAL DEATHS.

T. Corwin Anderson, the widely known short-horn breeder, died at his home in Montgomery county on last Wednesday. In less than three hours after Mr. Anderson's death, his son Jay, aged 17 years, also died. The former had been in ill health for several years, but the latter was sick only a few days, having inflammation of the stomach.

The two corpses lay together in the same house at the same time, and the two funerals took place the same day, which reminded their neighbors and friends of the calamity several years ago when the house was blown down by a tornado and Mr. Anderson's mother and sister were killed.

FAITH CURE IN NEW ENGLAND.

The courts of the country where people in the olden times were burnt for witchcraft, have taken hold of that wild theory called "Faith Cure." A girl died last week, and the coroner took the case in hand. The jury after deliberating less than fifteen minutes brought in this verdict: "We find that the said Martha Olsen came to her death by typhoid fever while under the care and guardianship of Carl Olsen, and we further find that her death was due to his criminal negligence in not securing a physician for her in time, and for not carrying out physician's instructions when communicated to him. And we respectfully call the attention of the grand jury to the vicious practices which are carried on by members of the sect, or religious organization, to which the deceased and the prisoner belonged."

The grand jury has found a true bill against Olsen, and he is in deep trouble.

PROCLAMATION OF THE GOVERNOR TO THE PEOPLE OF KENTUCKY.

"Commonwealth of Kentucky, Executive Department.—Whereas, Official information has reached me that the laws of the State are set in defiance by your subjects; that some of the civil officers, elected by yourselves and sworn to discharge their duty to so many, give covert assistance to the criminal classes; that murders and assassinations are perpetrated with impunity; that civil officers are resisted by force of arms in the discharge of their duty, and that the people of the county have permitted themselves to be terrorized by the lawless acts of a few individuals as have returned obedience to the civil authorities in their efforts to arrest persons charged with the commission of crimes:

"Now, therefore, I, S. B. Buckner, Governor of the Commonwealth of Kentucky, have deemed it my duty to send State troops to your county. It is proper that I should inform you of the object of their coming.

"It is not for the purpose of relieving you of your responsibilities of citizenship, or to discharge for you the duties imposed on you by laws of your own making. They come in strict obedience to the civil authorities, to support the dignity and authority of the Court, and to aid in enforcing the law, not only against those who violate, but also against their aiders and abettors, and against those citizens who give indirect assistance to crime by refusing to aid the civil authorities in enforcing it.

"You are invited with the same rights as the people of other counties; you have equal rights; you have equal interest in the observance of law and owe the same obedience to your civil officers when summoned to enforce it.

"The presence of the military deprives you of none of your rights, and relieves you of none of your responsibilities. They are with you to give evidence that the power of the State is behind you, to give such support as may be necessary to vindicate the law.

"You must discharge your duty as good citizens to show that you deserve to be sustained. If you refuse to discharge your duties as good citizens, you have no right to expect others to discharge those duties for you.

"I call upon you, therefore, to respond promptly to the summons of the civil authorities; to obey them implicitly in their attempts to arrest and bring to speedy justice, or, if related by force, to shoot down, under the orders of the civil authorities, the assassins who threaten, in your midst, the peace and welfare of society.

"It is by such rigorous measures alone, under the authority of your own officials, that you can expect to maintain peace in your midst, and protect your material interests and civil rights against the armed aggressions of a few desperate men, whose lawless acts are a reproach to your civilization.

"In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the Seal of the Commonwealth to be affixed, at Frankfort, this 14th day of September, 1889.

ANNIVERSARY OF MISSIONS.

At the anniversary of missions Saturday night, the Financial Secretary stated that there had been raised this year for foreign missions $4,699.43, and for domestic missions $2,957.

Bishop Wilson delivered the address before an immense audience at the Court-house. He spoke of being a delegate to the World's Missionary Conference, held in London last year, where 1,500 were present from all over the world. "The man who repudiates foreign missions repudiates the whole Gospel, and I challenge contradiction," said the Bishop with great emphasis. "The man who repudiates foreign missions repudiates the whole Gospel, and I challenge contradiction."

Edinburg county shows many evidences of improvement, and people are becoming fully alive to the fact that their county contains a great deal of fertile and productive soil, and there is no reason why the county should not rank foremost of the counties in this section.—Irvine Eagle.

Nothing that Editor Richardson of the Glasgow Times is eating apples of a second crop produced by the same tree this season, reminds us that Mr. Kate Dunderer will soon be doing likewise, if the cold snap don't make them fall off. being present. Gen. W. S. Rosecrans was elected President. The object of the organization is to induce Congress to buy the old battlefield of Chickasaw and convert it into a National Park, dedicated to the memory of the soldiers of both armies who fought and fell there.

Mrs. Lizzie Ingram, wife of Napoleon Ingram, of Plummers Mill, this county, was assaulted by some unknown men Monday night and terribly beaten. She was in a delicate condition at the time, and premature labor resulted, from the effects of which she died this morning. There is an air of mystery about the case, and the woman could not be prevailed on to make a statement. The neighborhood is incensed, and the husband is strongly suspected. No arrest yet.—Flemingsburg Telegram.

The city of Frankfort took its name from the killing, in the fall of 1770, of Stephen Frank on the spot where the city now stands. A party of pioneers on their way from Harrodsburg to Man's Lick, in Jefferson county, for a supply of salt, camped there and threw up slight breastworks for protection. They were attacked by the Indians during the night, and Stephen Frank was killed, and two others, Bryan and Tomlin, were wounded. The spot after that was known as Frank's fort, hence Frankfort.

Night before last between the arrivals of the express trains at Livingston a transfer pouch of mail was stolen from the depot at that place. The pouch was found next morning about 200 yards south of Rockcastle River station, the straps having been cut with a hatchet that was found near the place. The mail was secured, and promptly returned, some 15 or 20 letters having been opened. We understand that there was no registered matter in the pouch. It is probable that the party or parties will be arrested before this appears in print.—Mt. Vernon Signal.

Gen. W. J. Landrum, of Lancaster, passed through the city Wednesday on his way to Frankfort to argue before the Court of Appeals a case that is interesting because of its novelty. It involves a claim of $15,000 against the Standard Oil Company, preferred by a gentleman of Garrard county, on account of the destruction of a spring by the pollution of waters. A warehouse of the Oil Company was located near the water supply and the leakage of the illuminating fluid flowing into the spring, the water becoming impregnated with oil and thus destroyed its usefulness. The mixing of the oil and water, thinned in itself, led to the suit for $15,000.—Danville Advocate.

ONE OF LIFE'S HAPPY HOURS.

At the new and elegant home of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Myers, on West Main street, on Saturday evening, September 21st, it was my pleasure to witness what is termed a Tea Party of Richmond's little beauties, it being the fifth anniversary of their only daughter, Mary. On the same day, seven years ago, at high noon, in the town of Harrodsburg, the first and last of the young lady's life was taken. The guests themselves the solemn vows of husband and wife.

At about three o'clock the little butterflies began to arrive, neatly and beautifully attired in tea gowns of various hues and colors, and two dozen or more were there—Ray Strong, Nellie Chasault, Geneva Mandy, Miss Dyer, Kate Smith, Edna Shackelford, Laura Belle Luxon, Carlisle and Eleanor Chennutt, Kittle and Florence Chennutt, Amy Smith, Alice Ballard, Annie and Emma Duneau, Esna and Sadie Burman, Margaretta Smith, Sallie McDowell, David and Hallie Letcher, Mary Shackelford, Mary Thomas, and Lucie Taylor, Carlisle, Walker and Birdie Turner. After a couple of hours of happy play in which all took part, they prepared to the dining room where their cheerful countenances met tables bountifully laden with cake, candies, fruits, nuts, ice-cream, sherberts, etc., which will be also to heartily enjoyed. The carriages and luggies began to arrive to see the little ones home with many kisses and kindly remembrances, hoping that such pleasant and delightful evenings would often occur.

Griley, 35, weight 1487 lbs., at 4 cents, and of R. B. Bunden, 61, weighing 1487, at the same price.—Winchester Democrat.

The hitherto invincible Prince Wilkes has been beaten in South America. He started recently against Gladys, by Royal Fortnagh, and Georgetown, the Blue Bell pacer. The race was three-quarters, two feet, and after Georgetown and Prince Wilkes had each taken a best Galloway came on and won the race.—Stock Farm.

One of our large herds of cattle and horses had yesterday

The contract to furnish meat to the Asylum for one year from Sept. 9, was awarded last Saturday to W. J. Withers & Son at $4.90 per hundred. There were ten bids, ranging from 4 to 6 cents per pound, and the contract was given to the lowest bidder. This is 30 cents per hundred more than was paid under the canceled contract with Mr. G. B. Coombs. The written contract is for beef and mutton to be furnished in equal quantities of fore and hind quarters and at such times as suits the Asylum authorities.—Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

A pest which made its appearance in this county only a year or two ago has spread considerable the present year. The farmers are alarmed about it. The plant is a parasite which fastens upon the roots of growing crops. It produces an immense crop of fine almost impalpable seed. It is death to hemp and tobacco. We heard of one farmer who cut his hemp and burned it to destroy the pest. It has been said that seeding to grass and grazing cattle or sheep will exterminate it. Some farmers sent this, however, and instance a case where land was kept in clover and grazed for two years, and when cultivated the third season was found as bad as ever. Enough of the seed remain in the soil to reproduce the pest. Some farmers think that repeated shallow plowings through the hot weather would be effective. We would be very glad to obtain any light on this subject and invite communications from farmers who have investigated it.—Versailles Sun.

Deafness Can't Be Cured

By local application, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness, (caused by catarrh), that we can not cure by taking H. J. Streng's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.

LINCOLN'S PROPOSAL

A Love Letter Which Is Not a Word of Love.

Abraham Lincoln's offer of marriage was a very curious one, and, singularly enough, it has but recently come to light. Numerous as his biographers have been, and closely as they have planned for his history, no one has yet written of the incident which was left for the latest one, Mr. Jesse Wells, of Greenfield, to discover this unique and characteristic production of Mr. Lincoln's almost untortured mind. The letter, the heartiest of written, presumably, to the lady he afterward married. Addressed to "My dear Mary," it read as follows:

"You must know that I can not see you or that you will not see me. I know that you are not in the city. I know

TWO DEADLY REPTILES.

The Snake With Its Sure Death, and the

Cobra's Almost Fatal

A friend of mine in Bengal, in the military service, who was a bachelor, one day invited a friend to dinner with him. The cook house was, as most cook houses are in India, about fifty yards from the house. The friend arrived and they talked. Dinner time came, but no request to come to dinner. Half an hour passed and my friend said: "Well, I wonder what's the matter with the housekeeper. It's quite late." They talked on until an hour had passed. Then my friend said:

"Well, we'll just go out and see." And what do you think they saw? Why, about a dozen snakes in the kitchen from side to side through the transom and scowling back and forth, was
